SOCIAL WORK 489/490: Professional Field Internship & Integrative Seminar

Course Description:

The integrative seminar, SOWK 490, focuses on the major elements of social work practice: assessment, intervention, policy implications, ethical imperatives and evaluation. Taken concurrent with the internship and through a series of assignments, the student tests the content of social work practice with experiences in field agencies.

SOWK 489 is the professional internship. Internships are in community agencies under the supervision of a social work professional. SOWK 489 affords students an opportunity to integrate classroom concepts and theories into practice. Students learn about people, social problems, service delivery systems, about helping and about self as a helper.

Students will be asked to demonstrate, through their class presentations, an understanding of how institutional racism, sexism, homophobia/heterosexism, poverty, alienation, and other oppressive conditions play a role in shaping the lives of clients. Students will be asked to demonstrate, through their learning contract, an understanding of the processes that perpetuate oppression and unequal access. Of special concern are groups experiencing social and economic injustices based on racial, ethnic, sexual orientation, sociocultural, and gender characteristics.

Co-requisites: Concurrent enrollment in SOWK 489.

The educational objectives for both SOWK 489 and 490 are the same and are met through a combination of the two courses. Professors for both courses will coordinate their learning activity to ensure course objectives are met.

Educational Objectives

The general goal is to integrate knowledge attained in the social work curriculum with the professional social work experiences brought forth in the internship in order to insure that knowledge and skills necessary to conduct entry level generalist social work practice are obtained by each student graduating from the professional program. The objectives delineated to carry out the goal are stated as student outcomes. Having completed this course, students will be able to:

1. Practice within the values and ethics of the social work profession.
2. Demonstrate culturally competent practice for work in diverse cultural contexts.
3. Use practice knowledge, skills, and theory to promote alleviation of poverty, oppression, and other forms of social and economic injustice.

4. Function effectively within the structure of organizations and across service delivery systems.
5. Use the generalist practice model with client systems of all sizes, including individuals, families, groups, organizations, and communities.
